Artist and designer Barbara Wyn Klunder takes on classic nursery rhymes and turns them on their heads, adding her own quirky twist to familiar favorites. Rock-a-bye baby laments the loss of her treetop to logging. Old Mother Hubbard must resort to a food bank.

Jack and Jill discover that their well water is polluted, and Mary watches her garden flourish with weeding and fertilizing. Second-hand smoke, recycling, allergies, logging, pollution, oil spills, gasoline shortages and crooked politicians are all treated with Klunderesque whimsy and wit.

Graphically striking, spiky, engaging black-and-white illustrations drive the point home -- what are we doing to the planet?
