After becoming highly agitated by Jeff Randle's actions in the Crystal Creek Police Station, Chris is on the run. Driving at high speed along the Nullabor highway, freakshow memories of the last eighteen years start to flash before his eyes, taking him back to a period dogged by drug and alcohol abuse and subsequent memory loss. After developing a friendship with a psychic and members of her medium society Chris starts to put together missing pieces from a hazy past. He learns that the gas fire explosion in Port Davis has forever changed him. It has also altered the relationship between his best friend and his sister. Chris has become bonded to the dark entity he brought into his life and can never return to Port Davis again without risking Janet and Darren's safety.
