They don't have any kids, but it sometimes like they've adopted their friend, Alyssa. She's cute and very sweet, but Alyssa just doesn't have what it takes to make adult choices. She couldn't finish college, she can't hold down a job, she doesn't seem to be able to save any money, and she pretty much depends entirely on Jared and Elizabeth. They care about her, so they decide to change things. They talk to Dr. Hunt, a man who specializes in a very special form of treatment for young women just like Alyssa. One night, when she is alone, Alyssa is taken. Two nurses show up, and they talk to her for a few moments. But pretty soon, they slip her into a straitjacket, they drug her, and they load her up into a van. Her treatment can now begin. The next thing Alyssa knows, she's at a clinic. They restrain her for her own safety. As her treatment progresses, there'll be degrading side effects, but that's okay. Dr. Hunt knows exactly what he's doing. He understands what a little girl like Alyssa needs. She needs to be regressed. This might be difficult for her, but Alyssa must give up on the illusion that she is a grown woman. She isn't. She might have a mature, young body, but that isn't enough. She simply lacks the wherewithal to take care of herself, so she's going to have to get used to spending time in straitjackets and taking her medicine. She's going to need to get used to receiving enemas, getting spanked, and doing as she's told. She's needs to learn how to play with her toys and to crawl on the floor. The doctor promises that her regression will depend entirely on her. Maybe she will be allowed to simply wear padded panties. But if Alyssa is going to be very naughty, she might need something more extreme. She might need plastic.

She might need to have all of her big girl hair removed. In the end, Alyssa is going to be a sweet little angel for her new owners. She'll be happier when she doesn't face the stresses of an adult. More than that, she'll even be grateful for her new life. Jerrod and Elizabeth can't wait. Please be advised: This 41,000 word novella features domination, age play, elements of hypnosis, mind control, spankings, domestic discipline, extensive medical play, enemas, and various medications. All characters are consenting adults over the age of eighteen.
