Lady Marcia Woode's forthright manner of dismissing her suitors was about to become the scandal of the London Season. A trip abroad was indicated, but when her father proposed a visit to the Chateau de Roux, the astute debutante spotted a marriage trap.

Fortunately, the Duc de Roux -- a superbly handsome man -- was even inclined to matrimony, preferring more sophisticated pursuits... United by their refusal to fall in love, the pair rode through the verdant French countryside. Then, an injured child and a deadly plot brought them down to earth -- and into each other's arms, joined in the Wonder and Perfection of Love...
