Lucas is the only man who can satisfy all her desires. Sally has a broken wrist and is struggling to cope with being off work and home alone. She's eaten nothing but soup in days and is sick to death of daytime TV. She goes for a walk but is distracted by the delicious smells coming from the local café. The tall and tanned Greek chef, Lucas, wants to look after Sally...and not just by feeding her with his delicious fried foods. He invites her back to enjoy a meal with him alone that night once the café is closed. His special brand of optimism and dominance has Sally bending to his will and begging him for more.

Their than innocent evening meal is finished off by a trip to the bedroom with a pot of chocolate spread because, as Lucas says, the only thing better than a hot naked woman is a hot naked woman covered in chocolate! Reader Advisory: This book contains creative use of fruit and vegetables.
