Jack Sosa knows the world of violence, sex, and danger. He grew up in that world, and as a man, he owns it. Then one day, while he is waiting for some cleaners to dispose of a body, a chubby girl sits with him, trying to make him feel better.

He is a stranger and she only a young girl, but when she leaves, she takes a part of him with her. Jack can't let this angel go, so he keeps her, determined to protect her. Now four years later, she's no longer a girl, but a beautiful woman, and Jack's feelings have changed, too, growing into something far beyond protectiveness. He cannot hide them for much longer. Piper has fallen in love with the man who saved her, but she never expects Jack to feel the same way. However, one kiss is all it takes. Even though Jack is twenty-four years her senior, she doesn't care. He is the man she fell in love with, the man who makes her body burn hotter than any fire.

However, Piper doesn't know the truth about the man she loves, and when she's taken by his enemy, her world is turned upside down. Can she find it in her heart to love a killer? Can Jack live with nearly killing his virgin angel?
