Ash was a personal trainer that had a lot of perfect clients, but none of them really interested him.

He was putting himself through college and was always busy, but he never had time for women. All of the girls at the club may have appeared perfect, but they were shallow and didn't hold much in the way of romance for him. He wanted a real girl and when Marie walked through the door, he knew that she was the one that he wanted and needed in his life. Marie was in a bad relationship and though she was there to get in shape, it was for her fiancée, not herself. She just wanted to be accepted and when the hot personal trainer started to hit on her, she didn't know what to do. But there was something about Ash that drew her in and before long; there was a kiss between them that changed everything.
