"Deafening gun fire sounded again, then three men came into sight. I remember sparking.

The TV crackled and went dead as I pulled the energy from it. A streak of electric blue shot from my hand hitting the figure that came around the door frame. He fell to the ground and it didn't take but half a second to feel the pull of his own internal electrical workings. I drew from him, and he was left just as dead as the television. Two left. They raised their weapons. I felt the surge pulsing, taking over. I heard Sura scream. Everything seemed to explode in flickers of white and blue." Running from the experimental grip of the Exodus Company, 4 must rely on strangers with familiar powers.
