

Corona

|                          |  |
|--------------------------|--|
| Author:           | Bushra Rehman                            |
| Genre:            | Fiction                                  |
| ISBN13:           | 9781937420390                            |
| Goodreads Rating: | 3.80                                     |
| Published:        | August 1st 2013 by Sibling Rivalry Press |
| Language          | English                                  |
| Pages:            | 154                                      |
| ISBN10:           | 1937420396                               |

Corona.pdf

Corona.epub

Razia Mirza is a Pakistani woman from Corona, Queens, who grew up in a tight Muslim community surrounding the first Sunni masjid built in New York City. When a rebellious streak leads to her ex-communication, she decides to hit the road. Corona moves between Razia's childhood and the comedic misadventures she encounters on her journey, from a Puritan Colony in Massachusetts to New York City's Bhangra music scene. With each story, we learn more about the past she's escaping, a past which leads her to constantly travel in a spiral, always coming closer to but never quite arriving home.