THE ONLY PERSON I'VE EVER LOVED was taken from me during the first reaping several months ago. I don't know how, or why, but something changed inside me, turning me into something I never knew existed. Sasha came into my life and saved me, teaching me to use the powers I'd known so little about. But saving me wasn't her end goal. She handed me over to the Fallen like I meant nothing to her, and now, revenge is all I see. Destroying those who screwed me fills my every thought but there's one thing standing in my way. He came along and became the one Fallen I don't think I can live without. TROUBLE SHOULD HAVE BEEN HER NAME. When I found her planting a bomb on the compound, I threw her in a cell, leaving her the option to cooperate or starve. I should kill her and put an end to the suffering she's determined impose on all of us, but there's just something about her that keeps holding me back. The friction between us is explosive. I can't resist her when she gets that look in her eye, and she damn well knows it.
