Ellen didn't believe in fate. She made her own luck. Or rather that was how she thought life worked. It took a journey across country for Ellen to start wondering whether her life had already been mapped out for her and start questioning her beliefs.

(Part 3 of 3) Ellen and her twin brother Aaron are time-travellers. This should be exciting, but it's not. They don't know why they have this ability, they don't know how they got it and don't know how to control it. For now they just know they are stuck out of time.

And now they find themselves travelling around Britain during the Second World War.

With the help of their friends Marianne, Billy and Brook the twins travel to London in search of a possession, belonging to Major Willis of the Wrens. Exactly what they have to do when they meet him is something, they hope, will present itself at the time. The only thing to stop them in their mission is the strange Victor Garrone and his cronies, who have been chasing them since York. Will Ellen and Aaron make it back to 2014 or will Victor stop them in their tracks? [This is the final instalment of a three part adventure. It is recommended that you read parts one and two beforehand.]
