From the moment young Major Bradwell rescued the lovely Imelda from the two drunken louts at the inn, the spark of love struck hard. But their romance seemed doomed. Sir Darrell Conyngton, awaiting Cousin Imelda, who was coming to act as companion for his wife, Charity, was opposed to the politics of the young major. Charity's heart went out to her unhappy kinswoman. She deeply understood the agony of lost love. But there was something far worse in store for all of them. For the talk of witchcraft that had been terrifying the village was coming very close to Conyngton. Too close. And once again Charity and Darrell were in danger of losing their home - and each other.
